WILL BRITAIN GIVE UP IRAQ MANDATE?
Likelihood of Iraq Following Egypt
Possibility of Iraq Entering Egypt

EFFECT ON PALESTINE

LONDON, September 20 (P.T.A.)

It is now almost certain that Britain will not renew the mandate of Iraq by the date fixed by the League of Nations. The British Government is likely to give up the mandate in the near future, which will remove a considerable obstacle from the way of British policy in the Middle East.

The policy of the British Government in the Middle East is based on the assumption that Britain will retain control of Iraq. The British have been trying to strengthen their influence in Iraq by providing financial and technical aid. However, the Iraqi government has been growing increasingly independent, and the British are no longer able to control the country.

The British government is now considering the possibility of transferring control of Iraq to the League of Nations. This would remove the responsibility for the maintenance of order in Iraq from the British to the League, which would be a major step towards the establishment of a new political order in the Middle East.

GREAT BRITAIN, INDIA AND DOMINIONS
RENEW CONSENSUS

London, September 21 (P.T.A.)

The British government has announced that it will support the renewal of the mandate of Iraq by the League of Nations. This decision was taken after careful consideration of the interests of Britain, India, and the other Dominions.

The British government has been under considerable pressure to renew the mandate of Iraq, as the League of Nations is due to consider the matter at its next meeting. The British government has been concerned about the implications of not renewing the mandate, as it would have serious implications for British prestige and influence in the Middle East.

The renewal of the mandate of Iraq would also be a significant step towards the establishment of a new political order in the Middle East. It would remove the responsibility for the maintenance of order in Iraq from the British to the League, which would be a major step towards the establishment of a new political order in the Middle East.

WARRIORS IN PALESTINE WATERS

Naval Visits to Haifa and Jaffa during course of Month

London, September 19 (P.T.A.)

The British government has announced that it will send naval vessels to Haifa and Jaffa during the course of the month. This decision was taken after careful consideration of the interests of Britain, India, and the other Dominions.

The naval visits will be a significant step towards the establishment of a new political order in the Middle East. It will also be a demonstration of the British commitment to maintaining order in the region.

Another Battleground for Jaffa

A third cruiser squadron will visit both ports on September 29. HMS. Barham will remain off Jaffa from October 1 to October 8.

In addition, the battlecruiser Malaya will arrive at Jaffa on October 17. Further movements of warships in Palestine are still undecided. They will depend partly on the Government's view of the situation at the end of October and how far further precautionary measures may be necessary. The Admiralty will announce in due course its programme for the future.
