U.S. Leaders Pay Tribute to Gandhi

WASHINGTON—President Truman and Mrs. Truman, who visited India on a state visit, paid their respects to the late Mahatma Gandhi yesterday morning at the White House.

Truman expressed his admiration for Gandhi's contributions to world peace and his dedication to nonviolent resistance. He said, "Gandhi was a man of peace, a man of honor, a man of principle. He will be remembered as one of the great leaders of our time."

The President and Mrs. Truman were greeted by Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, who conveyed his appreciation for the gesture. Nehru said, "We are grateful to the United States for honoring our great leader, Mahatma Gandhi. He was a source of inspiration to our nation and his message of peace and nonviolence has guided us for decades."

Gandhi's Murder Sets Off Bombay Riot

The murder of Gandhi has plunged India into a state of grief and mourning. His followers, who number in the millions, are expected to stage nationwide protests in the next few days. The government has declared a day of mourning and has ordered all government offices and schools to close.

Greens and co-operative shop owners urged their followers to participate in the protests, which are expected to be peaceful. However, in some areas, there have been reports of clashes between protesters and police.

Gandhi's life, a symbol of peace, was cut short by a fanatical group that targeted him for his beliefs. His death has left a void in the Indian political landscape and has raised questions about the future of the country.

The murder has also sparked concerns about the safety of other prominent figures in the country, including Prime Minister Nehru and other leaders. Security has been tightened around high-profile figures, and a special investigation team has been set up to probe the murder.

Gandhi's message of nonviolence and peace has left a lasting impact on the country, and his legacy continues to inspire generations. His death is a loss for the nation and the world.
