interned. Haifa was attacked both Sunday and yesterday and many Jews were wounded, with some killed.

At Beisan all Jewish houses were burned, one Jew was killed and 21 wounded. Rehovoth, south of Haifa, was attacked, but no casualties were reported. The Jewish town of Artuf, between Jerusalem and Jaffa, was set on fire.

Considerable looting has occurred in all Palestine and Arab atrocities were reported from Moza, but confirmed. Many Christians in Jerusalem marked their houses with blue crosses as a sign that the village harbored neither Jews nor Moslems.

FOOD SHORTAGE FACED

There is a scarcity here of medical supplies and food. Prices for the latter have reached almost famine level. The Jerusalem Jewish Communal Board has started a fund to maintain the refugees who have come here from all Palestine.

20,000 N. Y. Jews March In Protest Parade

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—This city's Jewry demonstrated yesterday its sympathy for its brethren in Palestine.

A parade of 20,000 members of the Jewish race marched down Broadway, stopped at City Hall to enlist the sympathy of the Mayor, and continued on to the British Consulate in Whitehall street, where a formal protest was read to Sir Harry Armstrong, British Consul General. Then after gathering in Battery Park to voice their final protest against "atrocities and persecutions" the paraders dispersed quietly to their homes.

At the same time the Advisory Council of the Zionist Organization of America was in session mapping out a campaign of aid for the sufferers in Palestine.

Later in the evening the Jewish War Veterans, a national organization of all Jews who fought under the American flag in the World War, held a protest meeting at their headquarters, 243 West Thirty-fourth street.

The Zionist Organization, in conjunction with nine other Jewish societies, met in the Hotel Pennsylvania to register their protests against the British Government's "laxity" in protecting their people in Palestine and to call on all Jews throughout the country to voice public protest at the "outrages" by the Arabs.

Yesterday afternoon thousands of Jews gathered in Stuyvesant Square in answer to a call by the American Palestine Jewish Legion, a veteran society made up of those Jews who fought with the British during General Allenby's victorious march through Palestine. Many carried banners of protest, calling on "England to remove the Palestine officials who have degraded the Government," or on America to take action. Others demanded that the Labor Government act in the crisis or that acting High Commissioner Luke be removed and punished.

The band struck up "The Star-Spangled Banner." Then it played the "Hatikva," the Jewish national anthem. Three thousand voices were raised in unison and slowly the column got under way. At the head of the column walked Elias Ginsberg, one of those who had marched into Jerusalem with Allenby, and on either side of him were the two other marshals of the parade. M. Mordecai Danzias, president of the Zionist Revisionists of America, and Samuel Friedlander, chairman of the American Palestine Jewish Legion. Somewhere in the long line paraded Rafael Hurwitz, father of Benjamin, the young American student killed Sunday.

LAZARON SEES ARABS CHECKED

Confidence was expressed today by Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron of Madison Avenue Temple that the British Government would be able quickly to check the conflict in Palestine between the Arabs and Jews that has already resulted in death to many, including Americans.

He said:

"The present situation is the result of considerable discontent that has grown with time.

"The wailing wall as one of the sacred places of both groups has been one of the principal causes of conflict, but there are many other elements.

"I feel sure that the British Government will soon be able to control the situation."

Only a short business session was on the day's schedule. Two score drum corps arranged a series of serenades to put them in form for the national contest to be held tomorrow when they are to march in a parade, which is expected to be three miles long.
